a longtime professor of ethnic studies at the university of california at berkeley ronald takaki was recognized as one of the foremost scholars of american ethnic history and diversity when the first edition of a different mirror was published in 1993 publishers weekly called it a brilliant revisionist history of america that is likely to become a classic of multicultural studies and named it one of the ten best books of the year now rebecca steffoff who adapted howard zinn s best selling a people s history of the united states for younger readers turns the updated 2008 edition of takaki s multicultural masterwork into a different mirror for young people drawing on takaki s vast array of primary sources and staying true to his own words whenever possible a different mirror for young people brings ethnic history alive through the words of people including teenagers who recorded their experiences in letters diaries and poems like Zinn's A People's History Takaki's A Different Mirror offers a rich and rewarding people's view perspective on the American story

Takaki traces the economic and political history of Indians African Americans Mexicans Japanese Chinese Irish and Jewish people in America with considerable attention given to instances and consequences of racism the narrative is laced with short quotations cameos of personal experiences and excerpts from folk music and literature well known occurrences such as the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory fire the Trail of Tears the Harlem Renaissance and the Japanese Internment are included students may be surprised by some of the revelations but will recognize a constant thread of rampant racism the author concludes with a summary of today's changing economic climate and offers Rodney King's challenge to all of us to try to get along readers will find this overview to be an accessible cogent jumping off place for American history and political science plus a guide to the myriad other sources identified in the notes

The history of multiculturalism and multicultural education is not understood although many scholars have written about it especially in recent decades the reason is that the historical interpretations of these prominent subjects begin by assuming a priori and partisan definitions and then construct historical narratives based on these definitions the historiography of multiculturalism and multicultural education therefore suffers from the historical fallacy of presentism this dissertation addresses the problems in the historical literature by providing an evidenced account of the history of multiculturalism and multicultural education this unexamined evidence is the historical usage and meaning of the terms multicultural multiculturalism and multicultural education since their introduction into the American vocabulary in about 1907 the meaning of multicultural in the 1930s can only be what people in the 1930s meant by multicultural not what people in the 2010s mean by the term the patterns and trends in the historical usage and meanings of multicultural multiculturalism and multicultural education will then be analyzed in light of the intellectual social political economic and educational developments of the time through this evidenced approach the dissertation will provide sound historical understanding that will contribute to educational theory research and practice by explaining the current panoply of meanings of multiculturalism and multicultural education that exists today immigration ethnicity multiculturalism and racism have become part of daily discourse in britain in recent decades yet far from being new these phenomena have characterised british life since the 19th century while the numbers of immigrants increased after the second world war groups such as the irish germans and east european jews have been arriving settling and impacting on british society from the victorian period onwards in this comprehensive and fascinating account panikos panayi examines immigration as an ongoing process in which ethnic communities evolve as individuals choose whether to retain their ethnic identities and customs or to integrate and assimilate into wider british norms consequently he tackles the contradictions in the history of immigration over the past two centuries migration versus government control migrant poverty versus social mobility ethnic identity versus increasing anglicisation and above all racism versus multiculturalism providing an important historical context to contemporary debates and taking into account the complexity and variety of individual experiences over time this book demonstrates that no simple approach or theory can summarise the migrant experience in britain
